

What was Babel about?

Babel was the first world empire after the Flood. It was a single world empire comprising all peoples, living in one place and speaking one language.

Such a centralization of power took away the liberty of the many and placed it in the hands of the few.

Unfortunately, the few were similar to the WEF today, in that they aspired to replace God - to “build a tower unto heaven” - a monolithic system.

So, it was important to break up this system, confuse their tongues and disperse the peoples across the earth - to decentralize.

When the system collapsed, one dissident was Abraham, who migrated south.

Subsequent empires were the Egyptians, Assyrians, Babylonians, Persians, Greeks, Romans. We should include the European colonial empires that were precursors of the EU.

Slowly a global empire has formed again, this time with high tech to monitor and control everyone. Once again, the solution is decentralisation, to distribute power to the many.

So, what was Babel about, and what might confuse their message? There should be many voices, not just one. There needs to be open access to uncensored information. Be an independent voice, and keep spreading truth.
