

Calling

By Craig Paardekooper

A calling will manifest as a perfect fit between your skills and your circumstances, as if you were made for this task...born for this.

My personal testimony is that I feel I have been put in positions to prepare me for what is happening now. The fit between acquired skills and current events is phenomenal to me.

Skills acquired include knowledge of the psychology used by the propagandists we are up against , knowledge of pharmaceutical science , knowledge of computer science, knowledge about God, knowledge of mathematics and knowledge of how to be homeless.

In addition to this, I have had several encounters that confirm this calling. These encounters were periodic and strange, and there were many.

All the threads of my life came together in this “apocalypse” – meaning that all my disparate skills and motivations seemed to find a home.

I have no doubt that many can say the same.

Through one thing or another you may feel you have been prepared for this time. You have a sense of mission, of election for a purpose. No doubt you too may have noticed odd encounters prior to Covid.

Extreme situations, where there is a strong polarity between good and evil, give birth to strong motivations – motivations born out of survival – out of the threat that evil poses – and the challenge of overcoming it – motivations that are so powerful that they manifest as PURPOSE...as CALLING. Such situations focus all of our abilities, and weave all our skills into a common thread – because our goal is clear and our aim is certain.

War has this effect. It's the spirit of the Blitz.
