MY STATUS

1. You have not proven with evidence that I personally am infected with a virus.
2. You have not proven with evidence that I personally pose a danger to anyone.
3. You have not proven with evidence that I personally have caused actual bodily harm to anyone.

I DO NOT CONSENT TO YOUR TREATMENT

1. Under human rights law I have the legal right to exercise free and informed consent and refuse ANY medical treatment.
2. The treatments you propose have caused death and injury. I can provide evidence of this.
3. There is no need for treatments anyway, since I am not infected, and pose no danger to others - unless you can prove otherwise with evidence.

REGARDING COERCION

If you force me to take your treatment, you will be acting illegally against my free consent, and you will be committing the crime of assault and battery.

If you discriminate against me for not taking your medical treatment then you will be acting illegally – without any evidence of any danger posed by myself to others you will be restricting my access to services that are vital to my education, work, health or emotional well-being.

PROSECUTION

My Rights :

In accordance with all laws since Magna Carta until Human Rights Act 1998, no citizen shall be deprived of life, liberty or possessions except in a court of law where evidence is provided by both sides and a verdict is reached by an unbiased jury that an actual crime has been committed.

You have not proven that I am infected. You have not proven that I pose a danger to anyone, and you have not proven that I have harmed anyone. Therefore no crime has been committed. Therefore my rights are protected under the above laws – which state that no one shall be deprived of life, liberty or possessions unless guilty of a crime.

I have a right to decline any medical treatment. And I decline your treatment because there is evidence that it has caused death and injury.

Allegations :

Should you wish to persist in coercing or discriminating against me – I will have no option but to prosecute you or your organisation for –

1. acting illegally by not providing informed consent to myself and to others, because you have not provided any information to myself or to others about the possible adverse effects of your treatment.
2. acting illegally by applying coercion and discrimination to enforce a medical treatment that I and others should only accept through free informed consent.
3. acting illegally to restrict my access to resources that are provided to others who accept your treatment. This is discrimination and a violation of human rights for which you can be prosecuted. Restriction me from resources is unlawful, and I must prosecute for compensation AND for restoration of those resources by you.

Prosecution and compensation will be sought, AND you will be made to desist from further assault and discrimination.
